You Be the Judge

Who decides what is art? You do!

When the subject is art, it’s helpful to know what you like – why you like something or why you don’t.

How you decide whether something is art isn’t easy. It requires careful looking and thinking, too.

Here are a few questions to think about when you look at art:

Is it imaginative? Is it original? Does the artist have a special skill? How does the artwork make you feel? What other questions would you ask yourself?

Pop artist Andy Warhol once said, “Everyone is an artist.” Think about this statement. Do you agree? Why or why not?

Put Your Looking Skills to Work in the Galleries

Pulled, Pressed, and Screened
American prints from the 1930s through 1970s.

Cityscapes: Silkscreen Prints
Photorealists are inspired by photographs of everyday scenes.

Pop Art in America
Ordinary objects often are the subjects of these artworks.

What Is a Self-Portrait?

A self-portrait is a representation of oneself . . . but does it have to look like the person?

Artist Jim Dine’s bathrobes are a self-portrait. Dine often used his possessions, such as the bathrobe, to represent himself. Look for the artist’s handprint in this lithograph.

What clothing item or object in your home would you use as a portrait of yourself? Why?

Jim Dine, Two Florida Bathrobes, 1986, lithograph

Sketch your self-portrait using an object that has special meaning to you.

©2014 by the Leigh Yawkey Woodson Art Museum Education Department

Three distinct exhibitions highlighting the diversity of twentieth-century printmaking processes were organized by these museums:

• Pulled, Pressed, and Screened: Important American Prints, Syracuse University Art Collection
• Cityscapes: Silkscreen Prints by Photorealist Artists, Museum of Art and Archaeology, University of Missouri, Columbia
• Pop Art in America, Museum of Art | Fort Lauderdale, Nova Southeastern University

700 North Twelfth Street
Wausau, WI 54403
715.845.7010
www.lywam.org

Follow Us Weekly blog Woodson Wanderings